

Section 301,

Welcome to FAMU College of Law! By this point, many of you have retrieved the reading packets that I've placed behind the Reference Desk in the library this week during Orientation. Indeed, if you have not done so already, please retrieve a reading packet as soon as possible. Understanding that many of you will not have your books during the first week of classes, the reading packets contain the reading assignments that I'd assign to you during the first two (2) weeks of class. Monday's class will largely be introductory; therefore I've not assigned any reading for the first day. I will hand out syllabi in class on Monday. Our primary casebook will be Dukeminier, Krier, Alexander, and Schill, Property (Aspen Publishers 7th Edition, 2010) ISBN# 978-0-7355-8899-8.

For Wednesday's class, August 13th, I'd like you to read pages 3-18 for discussion in class. For those of you anxious to finish the reading for next week (the first week of classes), please read pages 18-29 for discussion in class on Friday, August 15. You will receive further instructions on assignments and expectations for the semester in class on Monday. I'm looking forward to a productive and enriching semester. I look forward to seeing you on Monday bright and early!
